CONVERSATIONS WITH EX-SHERIFF PARKINS.

My lawyer is a shark,
My maid the morning lark:
My priest is a fool,
But my dog has a soul.
[Old Rhymes.

Said the Sheriff, Mr B., I have now been in the United States for several years, and find that the bloody lawyers have destroyed all the liberty and virtue of the descendants of Englishmen. Look at an enlightened merchant who makes his fortune by industry, integrity, and honorable conduct. Is not such a man an honor to society and to human nature? But the bloody, blasted lawyers are the very pests of the age. I never knew but one honest lawyer, and when he got a chance, he cheated me out of £4000 sterling.

He had nothing to brag of in that kind of honesty, said I.

He had not? I think he had. I was thankful to God Almighty that he had not cheated me out of £10,000. I thus saved £6000. Keep clear of the lawyers, Mr B. All my troubles in this life have grown out of the tricks of the bloody lawyers. Let me introduce Mr Wiggins here, from Yorkshire. "Mr Wiggins," said he to him, "here am I confined—see few persons, care for none—the sport of lawyers, and without any comfort, unless it be the little Herald in the morning, and that allowance is now cut off by a negligent carrier"

If am sorry you don't get the Herald regularly, said I.

I do want to get it regularly. So I see you are going to publish an Evening Herald. Don't try to do too much, Mr B. I like the idea of a Sunday Herald. I knew Perry, the original proprietor of the Morning Chronicle. What a smart fellow he was! He rose from nothing by his talents. He had wonderful tact in his way. I believe he began life a baker. I used to write a great deal for him. Bless my soul! dear B., what days these were, when I was the greatest man in all London. On my introduction to the office of High Sheriff, the populace took my horses out of my carriage, and dragged me through the streets to the Mansion House. "Come," said I, "my lads, this wont do. I pay for horses to drive me. Never do so again, you rascals." The fellows laughed, off hats, and halloaed, "Parkins forever!" "hurra for Sheriff Parkins!" "You rogues, go home to your work shops; go to your work and be d——d to you: stop, give these fellows a pot of beer apiece," said I to my attendants. They bawled out more lustily than ever: "Sheriff Parkins forever and ever!" "Now," said Lord L—— to me one day, "what the devil are you after, Parkins? There is a good deal of talk about what your intentions may be: I hear much of it at Windsor Castle." I was at this time a new broom in office. I was connected with the whig interest, but I never went even the whole length with the whigs. I was an independent man.

But to return. My popularity as Sheriff of London made me a powerful man in the popular movements of the day. The Duke of York, one day on the turf at Newmarket, sent Lord Lowther to me. Lowther was a friend of mine. "Parkins," said his Lordship, after some casual remarks, "by the bye, don't you want to be introduced to the Duke of York?" "I have no particular desire to be made acquainted with his Royal Highness," said I. "Well, but he wants to know you; come, let us ride over the ground to his Highness's groupe." The royal party stood at a short distance, attended by several noblemen, gentlemen, and other blacklegs in stars and garters. "I have no desire to be acquainted with Mrs Clarke's ——" here I stopped; but what a cut. Lowther laughed. Yet frequently my political position made me sought by the tory lords.—I was even a spotsman in those days. I loved dogs. Mr B., do you love the dog?

He is a fine animal.

A fine animal! why my dear sir, he is a rational creature—see how he looks up in your face—licks his lips as much as to say, "well master what fun shall we have to-day—wags his tail as if it would speak orations. The dog from the tip of his nose to the end of his tail is all animation, sociality, intellect, friendship and gratitude. There is no other animal whose soul is spread over his whole body but the dog—unless it be the horse. Oh! my dear Blucher, where are you now a-days?

What Blucher? the Prussian General?

No my dear sir, neither Prussian nor Russian.—Blucher my dog, a fine civilized animal that was presented to me by Major Kirby, who formerly lived at Geneva. Oh, he was a noble creature and he almost saved my life once. I was travelling a few years ago in Canada near Kingston. It was winter. I rode a fine blood mare,—had a valise, a bright doubled barrelled pistol, and my dog Blucher, who almost talked familiarly with me as we travelled along. Well, sir, I came late in the evening to a small solitary house, where I thought of putting up for the night. In Canada such houses are licensed and must have accommodations always for three travellers. "Can I get lodging here to-night?" said I. "Oh yes," said a blackguard looking fellow. I dont know whether he was bloody lawyer or not, but he looked bad enough to be one. I desired him to take particular care of my mare—to spread a little straw for her to stand upon.

My dog Blucher kept by me all the time. He was as quiet and thoughtful as Pythagoras, looking occasionally up in my face, and wagging his tail as I moved or stirred about. Well in a short time an old countryman, a man by the name of Ross came there for lodgings. We were left alone in a room. "Do you know," said Ross to me, "what kind of a house this is?"—"No," said I. "Well the sooner you get away the better—I heard one of the men talk of you as being a fat fellow, with a purse—if you dont leave to-night you wont leave in the morning."

My Blucher seemed to know what Ross said. He rubbed up harder by my side and pricked his ears perpendicularly. "If any attack be made on me I'll meet them with interest." "That may be, but it is dangerous." Blucher growled and shewed his teeth. In an instant two of the ruffians entered, Ross was walking past them as it were. They seized him—knocked him down. "To the old rascal," cried one—I stood in the dim-lighted room at a short distance off—I held my fine double barrel clear as silver before me. It was loaded. Blucher stood firm as a rock, fierce as the devil. One of the fellows muttered "a pistol," another "the damned dog!" "Clear out of the way, you scoundrels," said I, "or I will blow your brains out." They slunk away. I walked to the door, Blucher with me—the coast was clear—I sallied out and made for the snow path for Carr's Tavern. At a short distance I fell in with a covered waggon, trudging slowly along.—"Hilloo!" cried I, "who's here," "a friend I guess," replied a screeching voice. "Are you a lawyer?"—"not as I know on," said the fellow. "Have you any lawyers in your stock or generation?" "Not as I remember on just now—Squire Atwell my good uncle by the mother's side was a Justice of the Peace, but not much of a lawyer—where be you from?"—"I come from that house in the hollow. I have had a narrow escape, and I dont know but they have murdered a poor fellow." "He! he! he!" "Why do you laugh? do you know them?" "I guess as how I've hear tell on them—but they're no great shakes—come jump up, friend, I'm for Carr's tavern—that be a swashing dog you have got, what would you ask for him?" "I would not part with him for money?"—"True, I never offer money, I'll trade for him with combs, tinpans and a few other notions." "He has I believe, saved my life—I would not give him for his weight in gold." "His weight in gold—that is too much—but I want a dog." "You do—a dog, my friend, is no lawyer." "That's just what I always told Squire Beardsley in Vermont. A dog is an honest critur—never asks more than he takes—never puts any in jail. If you ask 'how much?' a dog wags his tail—'just so much,' and he wont abate an inch. A dog is no lawyer." 'Give me your hand,' said I. He did so—I grasped it."

'We went forward, staid at Carr's that night.—Next morning I returned with a force to the house in the hollow, got my valise and mare, but the man Ross was never heard of since. And here,' said the Ex-Sheriff, 'is a paper I saw the other day, containing an advertisement of his daughter, a very pretty young woman, who wants to discover whether he is alive or dead. Ross left Scotland when she was three years of age. She has followed her father to this country. She is now in this city. I sent for her the other day. I told her all the particulars that I now tell you; but I fear that the Ross whom I met in Canada on that wintry evening, was the same person this amiable young woman is after.'

PRICE REDUCED!—Particular Notice to all Mechanics and others.
THE BOSTON MECHANIC and Journal of the Useful Arts and Sciences—at $1 a year only.
This monthly periodical, having received essential aid in its publication from many mercantile and other liberal gentlemen of the city, and the Publishers being desirous of placing it in the hands of every Mechanic in New England, whether employer, journeyman or apprentice—have concluded to put the work in future at the exceedingly low price of One Dollar a year, (instead of $2, as heretofore.)
The Publishers trust this arrangement will be acceptable, not only to the present patrons of the MECHANIC, but to all whose interests such a work is calculated to promote.
Much effort is now making by paying the best writers, and procuring good Engravings to illustrate the subjects treated upon, expressly for this work, to give it an interesting as well as substantial and highly useful character, and to make it valuable, especially to the Mechanics of New England, in every branch of their business—and also to Merchants and Manufacturers.
At the price above named, the MECHANIC is cheaper than any similar publication in the country—and will therefore require a large accession to its subscription list to sustain it.—The efforts of any individuals to extend its circulation will be gratefully acknowledged. Editors will especially oblige us by giving as much publicity as possible to this notice.
The BOSTON MECHANIC has received the strongest testimonials of approbation from many of the most respectable Journals, and from the Massachusetts State Lyceum. We are especially gratified in being able to give such names in favor of the work as those of LT. GOV. ARMSTRONG, and the Honorable Mayor of our city, gentlemen who have always exhibited a deep interest in the improvement of Mechanics, and that of DANIEL TREADWELL, ESQ., whose scientific reputation is too well known to need comment.
"We, the subscribers, consider the 'Mechanic, and Journal of the Useful Arts and Sciences,' a work highly meritorious and useful to Mechanics, and through them to the community at large; and we hope that its publication will be sustained.
SAMUEL T. ARMSTRONG,
THEODORE LYMAN, JR.
DANIEL TREADWELL."
The price of the work being so low, it will be necessary that payment be made in advance in all instances.
All letters (post paid) may be directed to

THE BOSTON MORNING POST.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1835.

☞ Upon our First Page will be found an interesting Conversation with Ex-Sheriff Parkins about Lawyers, Dogs and Murderers.

"The Fragment Party," as the opposition have been appropriately named, have, all at once, become extremely fastidious in relation to the private affairs of candidates for public office. Their feelings upon this point have met with a wonderful change within a very few months, for it is but a very short time since they paid court and homage to one of the most notorious debauchees in the whole Union; a man who is known to be entirely destitute of respect for himself and the office which he formerly sustained. Yet this man, with all the odium of such a life upon his head, was a fit idol for the federal aristocracy to worship—a "marvellously proper man" to be here honored with public processions and rejoicings. If the whigs would secure respect, they must practice consistency, and not condemn in one acts which are but mole-hills to the mountains of guilt and infamy which they honor and reverence in another—more particularly when the errors they condemn are the fruits of their own imagination, while those which they applaud are as visible to the whole country as the sun at noonday. The whigs should be extremely careful how they provoke scrutiny into the domestic affairs of candidates for public office—there are those in their own party, of high, if not the highest standing, who could not pass the ordeal unscathed, and it may not require much provocation to induce those who know, to speak. There are living evidences of "youthful indiscretion," yet in existence, and we warn the party claiming "all the decency," to beware how they provoke retaliation.

From Pernambuco.—The brig Florida, Smith, arrived at this port yesterday from Pernambucco, 19th May. Capt. S. reports that the Assembly of Pernambuco were in session, and the bill for continuing the copper currency in circulation was lost, and no provision had been made to call it in or redeem it. This being expected, large stocks of goods had accumulated on hand, and business was wholly suspended and at a stand. There were about 14,000 bbls flour in first hands, and bakers well supplied; 55 bbls Baltimore had changed hands at $9, payable in copper in three months, copper at 10 per cent. below par, and daily depreciating—the only lot sold for a considerable length of time—and the article was coming in from England, France, Germany, Mediterranean; and on the 18th an English schooner arrived from St Petersburg with 1436 bbls flour. Piles of flour lay in the streets, notwithstanding the rain at this season.

A Brazilian packet from Bahia arrived on the 18th, and reported that the Brazilians were to leave Bahia the 17th, accompanied by the U. S. ship Natchez, for Para, via Pernambucco and Maranham.

Belshazzar's Feast.—Mr Wright, the proprietor, has returned from New York, with this splendid picture; it will soon be ready for exhibition. This painting occupies nearly 200 feet of canvass, and is said to be more attractive than the "Departure of the Israelites."

"On the right of the Picture is the Handwriting on the Wall, below it a large Column with the Brazen Serpent entwined round it; in the centre of the Picture, behind the table, Daniel, the Prophet, is expounding the Handwriting, some of the Elders and Noblemen falling down before him, feeling that he alone is the worshipper of the true God; behind Daniel, in the centre of the hall of Jupiter, is the Idol of Belshazzar, named Jupiter Belus, with incense burning on each side of it, around which the people are prostrate and pushing forward for protection. In the foreground of the Picture, on the right and left of the table, are the Chaldean Priests, Magicians, and Soothsayers. The centre Court, behind Jupiter Belus, is the Hall of Astartes, or the Babylonian Venus, wherein the people are dancing, being ignorant of the terror and dismay which prevailed in the Hall of Jupiter. On the left of the Picture, is the Throne of Belshazzar: over it the Seven-Branch Candlestick; and below the Throne is Queen Nitocris; on the right of the Throne is Belshazzar, surrounded by his Court. Belshazzar, on hearing his fate told by Daniel, drops his cup while in the act of drinking to his Gods. In the distance, notwithstanding the darkness of the night, may be seen the Towers of Babel and Bell, to the left of which are the Hanging Gardens. The figure in front of the Table is a slave bringing in the Vessels of the Temple."

Johnston's Outlines, illustrative of the Journal, (Fanny's) are bought, and laughed at, by all who love a good satire. There are eight plates, which the Transcript thus describes—

'The first is a representation of the "Hoboken Turtle Club engaged in spoon exercise"—"My poor dear Father" being a guest. No 2, is an admirable hit—a London audience "getting up in compliment to my dear father"—and all going out but the critics in the pit, who are sound asleep. The next is Fanny's feast on Oysters, "six mouthfuls each." The next, admirable again—Fanny embracing the Newfoundland dog and the Newfoundland puppy, which she so "greatly coveted," forming a group of three, in excellent keeping with prints of the Three Graces—Garrick between Tragedy and Comedy, and other accessories which embellish the room. No 5, Refreshing effects of champaigne and plum cake, is not so good; but No 6, The people going to the play whilst it is "pouring cats and dogs," is irresistibly ludicrous; as is No 7, Fanny putting a pugnacious "little wretch" into a berth in the ladies' cabin—whilst his elder brother is showing his independence by kicking his mother.

The last is an illustration of the stage accident, by which Fanny, and father, and friends, were upset, and thrown, according to her own story, into grave attitudes. Johnston has made the most of his subjects, and got out the neatest thing of the kind that has been done yet.'

Buy his Book.—All who wish to read an entertaining little pamphlet and reward a meritorious but unfortunate man, can gratify their desires by purchasing Abram V. Courtney's 'Anecdotes of the Blind." In an account of himself, Mr Courtney, in the 26th page of his pamphlet, says—

"So perfectly do I know the map of Boston, that I have frequently acted as a guide to seeing men. The celebrated David Crockett was not a little astonished at being led by me from the Tremont house to the Blind school."

Mr Briggs has established a Foreign Letter Office in connexion with his Reading and Business Rooms, which are kept in excellent order.

Caldwell, with his usual spirit of enterprise, the fruits of which has been a splendid fortune, has introduced the cooking by gas into New Orleans.

The Poetical Tribe.—No sooner has a young man joined together a few rhymes, than he begins to imagine that nature has bestowed upon him some peculiar faculty—that he is one of nature's favorites—that he is a genius. Yet the Poet is an artist in every sense of the term. His talent is the result of study and practice, as well as that of the musician, the painter, or the shoemaker. All who make verses are not equal in the art, but all may succeed in making good verses, with an ordinary share of talent and perseverance. All shoemakers do not make equally good shoes; but every man who is sound in limb can learn to make a decent pair, not more certainly, though perhaps more easily, than one can learn to write good verses. The art of poetry becomes every day more and more easy to be learned, as the cant phraseology of poetry is multiplied. We are obliged, at the present day, to invent but few forms of speech to express almost every emotion which we may feel. They are all ready at hand, in every variety of combination, among the odes and sonnets and songs and elegies with which our libraries are stored.—The poet acquires fame at a smaller expense than any of the votaries of ambition. Distinction at the bar or in the senate—in science or philosophy, can be acquired only by many years application to study; and is therefore seldom acquired at a very early age. Nothing, however, is more common than to see a mere stripling bearing the laurels of poetical fame, long before he has arrived at maturity of mind. There is nothing extraordinary in the gift of writing verses. It consists merely in ringing harmonious changes upon the phrases of the poetical vocabulary, which may be learned at an earlier age than one can understand science or philosophy.—Good verses, or such as will gain the author the reputation of being a good poet, may be written by a larger number of individuals than there are to be found who could gain equal reputation by writing prose. Excellence in prose requires a greater variety of information and a greater maturity of thought than excellence in verse. Hence, we see many instances of authors who commenced their literary career by writing poetry, who, after they had acquired greater maturity of mind, forsook poetry and devoted themselves to prose. Poetry is more of an art and less a work of the understanding than prose. Hence, there are many distinguished poets who are fools and coxcombs, but a distinguished prose-writer is generally a man of common sense.—How many instances may be recollected of children who at an early age have written very fine verses, who yet from a want of intellect never attained the power of writing good prose. It is much easier to feel than to reason. Long before we arrive at the age of manhood we experience all the emotions which the human heart can feel—but not till long after the period of manhood do we learn the philosophy of life. Not poets only have experienced these emotions—but the stupid—the ignorant—the foolish, and the hard-hearted, have each of them felt, at times, all these emotions which are supposed to be peculiar to men of genius.

The Lawyer.—The Lawyer enjoys very ample opportunities for the study of human nature, but his knowledge of it is apt to be rendered partial by his familiarity with crime. All his professional habits are calculated to render him incapable of impartial reasoning and observation, being most generally enlisted wholly on one side or the other of a legal suit. He is apt to become bound to general rules of reasoning, to a system of logic founded upon precedent and authority, and when the latter are wanting, and he is left to the simple guidance of reason, he is apt to be in the situation of a near-sighted man who has lost his spectacles. He is generally the defender of established customs and institutions. He has studied the beauties of every rotten fabric of the law, until, like the antiquarian, he has become enamored of rust and decay. His professional habits lead him to study things as they are, rather than as they ought to be; and there are so many things to be learned which are necessary to professional eminence, or even moderate success, that in the pursuit of knowledge, he has no opportunity for the investigation of truth. That time which is so necessary for study must not be spent in meditation. The interest of the lawyer requires that he should defend rather than attack established institutions. He cannot profit by the practice of the law unless he submits to the arbitrary regulations of the bar, and defends all the arbitrary customs of the profession. He cannot quarrel with the law and at the same time derive profit from it. Hence every motive of self interest operates in his mind against any desire of reform. Many of the greatest men that the world has produced sprung from the profession of the bar, yet it must be confessed that its effects upon ordinary minds is a bigoted attachment to words and forms.

Learning and Reform.—It may seem a paradox to assert, what is nevertheless true, that reform never commences with the most learned classes of the community. A collegiate and regular course of classical and professional education always renders one more or less bigoted to the course of studies which he has pursued; to the opinions which seem to be engrafted upon the learning which he has acquired; and to the customs and habits which the discipline of the university has led him to adopt. The exceptions are generally among those who commenced their classical studies when rather advanced in life, and who did not remain long enough under college discipline to have the scholastic notions and prejudices of their instructors wrought into the very fibre of their minds. The majority of graduates are caught so early in life, and are kept under discipline for so many years, until the mind is fairly steeled against any new impressions—that at the time they obtain their second degree, they have become incurable bigots in every thing which formed a branch in their collegiate course of education, be they Unitarians, Rationalists, or whatever it may please their vanity to be called. Hence, we must not expect that reform, of any species, will commence with the learned of the schools, though, as a class, they are the most learned of the community; but with those few who have sufficient learning to detect the errors of a past age, and who, while acquiring this knowledge, have not been regularly disciplined to the indiscriminate admiration of every word or opinion which has been uttered by the objects of learned idolatry.

Robert Rantoul, Jr. Esq, will deliver an oration in Lynn on the 4th of July. Hon. Rufus Choate will deliver an oration before the whig party of the same place.

POLICE COURT.

Robert Kelly, during the six months last past, has been a man of extremely uniform habits—not habit;—he has alternately enjoyed lucid and liquid intervals, of precisely a fortnight's duration each, without any change or the shadow of turning. Being a right down clever chap, he might long have lived in the light and shade of his systematic and periodical alternations, if he had not, during his last liquid term, committed an assault on a man in a grocery store. The party assailed very meekly asked him what he meant by striking him; to which he rendered the conciliatory reply—"If you don't like it, I'll hit you again," and hit him again he did. The keeper then attempted to put Kelly out, and in the scuffle which ensued—a pretty stiff one, as Bob is a man of bone and muscle—his toggery was completely peeled of, and his person reduced "to a state o' nater." In the fifteenth round he was finished by a kick, that sent him floundering into the gutter.—Three months in the house of correction.

Thomas H. Jenkins, the white worthy who came to the Court last week to complain against a black burster, but was so drunk himself, that the Court would not listen to his story, was overhauled by one of the West Watch, on Monday night, in a state of betweenity, which rendered it somewhat doubtful whether he was mad or drunk. A few nights before Jenkins had been shovelled out of a livery stable, and a watchman helped him home to his family, but was saluted with the reproaches, instead of the grateful thanks of his wife, for bringing such a pest to her house, into which she had come to the determination never to admit him again "after hours," drunk or sober. It being proved, that he had been drunk every night for the past fortnight, he requested permission to explain his persevering shpfflication:—"The reason I was taken to the watch house last night, was that my wife would not let me in. I'm a hard working man, but I aint well used at home, and have to drink." As he was also a hard drinking man, he was sent for 4 months to the House of Correction, where his "hard working" habits will render him quite an "available candidate."

The "American Party" had better turn their eyes West. One of their Governors, (White of Louisiana, a stiff Whig) appointed George Pollock, who was a midshipman in his Britannic Majesty's service during the last war, to be Harbor Master, at New Orleans, in preference to Robert Spedden, who lost an arm in repelling the invader of his native soil, and who is as honest, as capable, as deserving a man as Mr Pollock.

The Baltimoreans are in ecstacy with the performances of the Boston Brass Band—a writer in the Patriot gushes out in the following strain upon their music at the theatre in that city a few evening's since:—

"It was a rare treat indeed—a feast for the lovers of rich harmony—which anon "held the 'raptured ear enchanted" with the mellifluous warblings of the bugle's softest notes, or gradually swelling into full chorus, carried the excited feelings resistless onward to ecstatic pleasure."

The Baltimore Gazette says—An affair of honor took place on Wednesday afternoon at Govanstown woods, between Lieut. B. W. Wright of the Navy, and George Stiles, Esq. of Chestertown, Md. After an ineffectual fire, the former expressed himself satisfied, and the affair terminated.

Incendiarism.—A man by the name of Samuel Damrell, has been bound over for trial at the Court of Common Pleas, in Middlesex County, upon a charge of setting fire to a carpenter's shop, belonging to T. H. Baylsy, burnt at Lechmere Point, on Sunday night.

Robert J. Walker, Esq. has been appointed by the Governor of Mississippi, to a seat in the Senate of the U. States, in place of George Poindexter, Esq. whose term expired 4th March last.

There was a serious riot at the Five Points in New York on Sunday evening—fighting commenced in the afternoon and did not terminate until 9 o'clock in the evening—no lives lost.

The American Gallery, Summer street, is worth looking into—some of the pictures there are equal to any in the Athenæum, and none worse than may be found at the latter place.

The Olympic Circus, on Traverse street, is said to be a very clever affair; the performances good, and the house convenient.

Important. The United States with France.—The Philadelphia Commercial Herald says: "Some alarm has been excited by a word or two dropped, as was said, from General Jackson lately at the Navy Yard, Washington, lest there might yet be a rupture between the United States and France, in reference to the Treaty of Indemnity. To quiet all fears on this subject, we deem it proper to say that when Mr Dickerson, Secretary of the Navy, was in this city a few days ago, he expressed himself in the most emphatic manner, that there would be no rupture with France; that the President of the United States and his cabinet, and the King of France and his ministers, all alike, felt the necessity of having the matter settled, and a disposition to expedite a consummation so devoutly wished. We also learn that the President has within a few days declared that no want of a little courtesy on his part should prevent the adjustment of this matter, and the receipt by those to whom it is due of the five millions of dollars to be paid by France.

It has been decided by verdict in the U. S. Court in Rhode Island, that the Captains of Steam Boats have a right to prohibit agents of stages from coming on board their boats to procure passengers. The case was Jenks, agent of the Tremont stages, vs Capt. Coleman of the Benjamin Franklin, who put Jenks forcibly on shore at Newport. It was argued by Mr Webster for plaintiff, and Mr Whipple for defendant. The jury gave a verdict for Captain Coleman in fifteen minutes.—Boston Advocate.

Died, in Batavia jail, on the 12th inst., Abram Van Wart. The deceased was sentenced to jail for stealing a five gallon keg of whiskey in this village; and he was such a complete sot, that there is but little doubt that his death was hastened by his not having his usual allowance of whiskey, say 2 quarts a day. He was a young man, and would have been hale and healthy but from his beastly use of whiskey. We hope his death will be a warning to his late associates, that they may, ere it is too late, refrain from the use of ardent spirits, or else they, like him, will go down to the grave, "unhonored, unwept and unsung."—Leroy Gaz.

A father consulted Themistocles to which of two lovers he should marry his daughter; whether to a poor man of merit, or to a rich man of bad character.

"Were I in your place," said he, "I should prefer a man without money, to money without a man."

City Affairs.—At a meeting of the Mayor and Aldermen, on Monday:

Benjamin Pollard was re-appointed City Marshal, and Caleb Hayward Clerk of Faneuil Hall Market. John Wilson and Jabez Pratt, were appointed Constables.

The ordinance for preventing and extinguishing fires, and establishing a Fire Department, was passed in concurrence with the Common Council, as amended.

The order appointing a Chief Engineer on the part of the Common Council, was read and laid on the table.

A communication was received from Wm. H. Tilleston, declining to be considered a candidate for the office of Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, which was read and filed.

Petition of Whitwell, Bond & Co. and others, to have the level of Water street raised; and of George Howe, to have said street raised and paved. Referred.

Resolve passed to widen Salem street, by cutting off the front of the estate of Mr Edwards, next the sugar house estate.

Petition of Isaac Davis and others, to have Hanover street widened near the head thereof; and of John Pierce and others to have Washington street widened near the Washington Coffee House. Referred.

The whole Board viewed the route of a proposed street from Richmond across Salem street, to Cooper street.

The subject of Second street, at South Boston, was referred to the Committee on streets.

The form of taking the census was passed in concurrence.

The order appropriating a sum of money for building a sea wall to connect the wharves of the Houses of Industry and Correction, at South Boston, was passed in concurrence.

Petition of Thomas Robinson, for leave to take water by suction from a well in Gouch street, to South Margin street. Referred.

The order appropriating a sum of money to build tombs in the South burial ground, was passed in concurrence.

From the Mercantile Journal.

The population of our city having become very dense, many of our active business men have removed their private residences to some of the neighboring towns, for pure air and water, and retirement, after the labors of the day are over. Without wishing to disparage any of those towns, for they are undoubtedly pleasant, we would express our surprise that the memorable heights of South Boston should have remained so long dormant. No place in the vicinity of our city possesses so many advantages for private residences, at the same time so convenient for business; the prospect is unrivalled; on every side the eye can turn, the sight is gratifying, the scenery various.

We are happy to learn that among the various associations that have been formed the past season for improvement, the section of the city to which we have referred, has not been overlooked, but that two companies, called the Mount Washington Association, and the Warren Association, have directed their attention to this valuable part of our city, and have made very considerable purchases, embracing some of the most eligible lots. If purity of air and water, pleasant prospects, retirement from the bustle of business, and yet so near that you may soon be merged in all its cares, are desirable objects, they may be attained by such locations as we perceive they are offered to the public by these enterprising companies.

The Hartford Review says, that seven of the persons engaged in the late negro riots have been arrested. He justly imputes, as we think, the late outrage there, as well as in other parts of New England, to the inflammatory and patricidal harangues of abolition fanatics.

Forty-nine steamers passed through the Louisville and Portland Canal (Ky) on the Ohio, during the week previous to June 9th—paying $2540 canal tolls. Thirty-five news steamers have passed through since Jan 1st. Receipts from that date to June 6th, $33,658, which is 6,517 more than in the same period last year.

PRICE REDUCED.—VEGETABLE EXTRACT.—This is the most valuable remedy yet discovered for the cure of Throat Distemper, or Malignant, Putrid, Ulcerated Sore Throat, Scarlet Fever, Canker Rash, Canker in the Mouth, Throat and Bowels, Diarrhea, Dyssentary, Sore Mouth of nursing women, and Acrid Humors of Teething Children; in short, for almost all the affections of the Mucus membrane of the mouth, throat and alimentary canal. These diseases are acknowledged by all physicians to be of the most severe and obstinate character, and have long baffled their skill and research. The discovery therefore of an effectual remedy for them, particularly for the various forms of Scarlet Fever, must be considered by every true philanthropist as an invaluable dosideratum. As a common and perfectly safe family medicine, it will be found of inestimable value in cases of common sore throats and colds—disordered state of the stomach and bowels—such as habitual costiveness, indigestion, flatulency, nausea and vomiting. Also, in cases of weakness arising from fever and all debilitating diseases, such as consumption, &c; it will be found very beneficial as a cathartic and alterative, as it neither causes debility, nor does it, as is the case with the operation of most medicine, so readily dispose one to take cold.

The Vegetable Extract has now been some time before the public, and its great powers justly tested. Hundreds of individuals have successfully tried it, and several eminent physicians are in the almost daily use of it in their practice, who are truly astonished at its great curative qualities, and are ready to give their testimony in favor of its efficiency and power. There now remains but one obstacle in the way of its very general use, and that is, the price The proprietors, being desirous to obviate this difficulty, have therefore determined to reduce the price to 62½ cents per bottle, for one year, which barely remunerates for the great expense of preparing the article; this will bring it within the means of every person, so that no one need suffer for the want of it; and the poor man be able to obtain it for himself and family, as well as the rich.

N. B.—Should any one still feel scrupulous of what is here stated, relative to the Vegetable Extract, and will call on one of the proprietors, No 118 State street, Boston, besides the recommendations which will accompany each bottle, other abundant and most satisfactory evidence will be exhibited respecting it.

PURE BEAR'S OIL may be had by the groce, dozen or single bottle, of A. BOYDEN, Hancock-st.

As in all cases, so especially in this, Venders, if they wish to secure the patronage of the public, should be extremely cautious not to sell an article for the Hair which tends to counteract rather than assist nature,

The virtues of Bear's Oil have been too long tested to need any eulogium; and at this time no one can doubt of its being the very best article for strengthening and promoting the growth of the Hair. An honest prejudice against the use of Bear's Oil has long existed, arising from two causes—the improper method of purifying it, and the imposition upon the public of a spurious article. That this prejudice may be wholly removed, this article now offered is warranted the pure Oil, rendered more pleasant by the addition of a little perfume—and the possibility of its injuring the Hair is entirely precluded by the manner in which it has been purified. To prevent fraud, the genuine is enclosed in two wrappers, the inside one being signed Arnold Boyden. aug 15
